Bible Stories:

In the parable of the sheep and the goats, Jesus equates acting justly for the poor, the weak and vulnerable with loving and serving God - see Matthew 25:31-45

Throughout his whole life, Jesus upheld the rights of the marginalized both in his stories and his miracles such as the outsider (the Good Samaritan); the outcast (the leper); the unfairly treated women, children and non-Jews).

Isaiah the prophet called God's people to worship God by behaving justly towards others - see Isaiah 58:6-8.

Quote: Christ's death is the satisfaction for all of the injustices that people have committed or will commit.

Application: As we near Easter, spend time this week reflecting on the crucifixion and resurrection and how they satisfied God's desire for justice.

Discussion Questions:

- 1) How does Easter demonstrate justice?
- 2) Is mercy the opposite of justice?
- 3) Is it possible to have justice outside of a Christian view? How would pure, right and true be determined?
